REPORT

OF THE

Solicitor General.

REPORT.

His Excellency, POWELL CLAYTON:

SIR: In compliance with your request, asking what progress has been made in prosecuting the cases known as the Real Estate Bank cases, I have the honor to make the following report. In order to more fully understand the matter, I will give a brief sketch of the whole transaction:

The Constitution of 1836 provided that the "General Assembly" might incorporate one "banking institution" calculated to aid and promote the great agricultural interest of the country; that the faith and credit of the State might be pledged to raise the funds necessary to carry into operation said bank, provided such security could be given by the individual stockholders as would guarantee the State against loss or injury.

The first General Assembly that convened under the Constitution of 1836, passed, for their first act, an act entitled "An act to establish the Real Estate Bank of the State of Arkansas," approved October 26, 1836. This act provided that the State of Arkansas should issue two thousand bonds, of one thousand dollars each, payable in twenty years, and bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, to the order of the Real Estate Bank, and that the faith and credit of the State were pledged for the payment of the capital and interest of said bonds. This was to be the whole of the capital stock of said bank, and in order to secure the State from loss or injury by issuing said bonds, the act provided that all the subscription to the capital stock of said bank should be guaranteed and secured by mortgage on real estate equal to the amount of stock subscribed, which mortgages were conditioned, among other things, "for the final payment of the bonds of the State and the interest thereon," which mortgages were by law transferred to the State, and it was provided that the Governor should not issue any State bonds until the President of the bank should certify that the mortgages had been executed for at least one-eighth more than the bonds required. The fifth section of said act provided that the Governor should appoint five managers, whose duty it should be to examine the subscription books, mortgages, titles, and all papers and documents etc., returned by the superintendents named in the act, to receive subscriptions and mortgages, etc., and to make out a complete schedule thereof, and file it with the Secretary of State.

September, 1837, A. H. Davis, Thos. J. Williams, Wm. D. Furgerson, and S. H. Hempstead, four of the managers appointed by the Governor, filed their schedule, showing that 2,250 shares had been subscribed to the capital stock of said bank; that 127,820 65-100 acres had been mortgaged to secure said stock; that said land had been appraised by appraisers in each county, appointed by the Governor, at the aggregate sum of 2,603,922 72-100 dollars.

Upon this, and the certificate of the President of the bank, the Governor issued the 2,000 bonds.

The officers of the bank soon found that they were unable to negotiate Arkansas bonds bearing only five per cent. per annum, and in the following winter they succeeded in getting the Legislature to pass a law authorizing the Governor to issue two thousand new bonds, bearing six per cent. interest, whenever the five per cent. bonds should be returned to the State; which law was approved December 19, 1837. The officers of the bank, however, did not even then find a ready sale for the bonds. In September, 1838, however, they sold part of the bonds, and on the 12th of December, 1838, the office of the principal bank, at Little Rock, opened for business.

Soon after the principal bank commenced business, the corporators thought that so good a thing ought to be extended, and they succeeded in getting the "Assembly" to pass a law, February, 1838, creating what was called the "Western Branch," and providing that subscribers should mortgage lands, etc., and that there should be 5,640 shares, and that the State should issue five hundred $1,000 bonds to the bank as soon as the managers appointed by the Governor, reported that every thing was complete. On the 8th day of July, 1839, Elliott H. Fletcher, W. W. Stevenson, and William Cummins, managers appointed by the Governor, reported that the number of shares had been subscribed, and that 60,290 24-100 acres of land had been mortgaged to the State, and that said lands had been appraised, as required by law, at the aggregate sum of $776,-840.06. Upon this the Governor issued the five hundred bonds. These bonds were hypothecated, by the principal bank, to the North American Trust and Banking Company for the sum of $121,336.54, and were, by the trust and banking company, hypothecated to James Holford for the sum of $350,000. The trust and banking company soon failed, and Holford retained the bonds, the bank never realizing only the $121,336.54.

November 2, 1839, less than one year from the time the principal bank first opened, it suspended specie payment. They continued to pay, however, in their own bank paper, which was at a large discount, until April 2, 1842, at which time "the executive board made an assignment of all the effects of the institution to certain of their own number, and other directors of the bank, fifteen in all, but carefully excluding from the trust all the directors of the bank appointed on the part of the State." This gave considerable dissatisfaction. Some of the local boards refused to surrender the effects of the bank which they held. The trustees brought a suit against the Little Rock board to compel them to deliver over their assets; but the circuit judge decided he had no jurisdiction. They then brought the case before the supreme court, and a majority of the judges decided "that the Little Rock board must surrender the assets in their hands; that the assignment was not only valid, but an excellent and wise measure."

January 31, 1843, the Assembly passed an act to settle and liquidate the affairs of the "Real Estate Bank," but the self-constituted trustees, that owed the Bank nearly three hundred thousand dollars, paid no attention, whatever, to this law.

In April, 1844, the trustees chose five of their own number for residuary trustees and gave over the whole control to them. July 29, 1844, the Supreme Court, upon a writ of quo warranto decided that the charter of the bank was forfeited.

The residuary trustees, notwithstanding this decision, that the charter was forfeited, kept possession of the assetts for over ten years. In 1853 the Assembly passed an act directing the Attorney General to file a bill in chancery to divest the residuary trustees.

In 1853 the Assembly passed an act to aid in bringing to light the true condition of the Real Estate Bank, and at the same time passed an act to establish a separate court of chancery, at the seat of government, so that the causes of the State, including that against the trustees and officers of the "Real Estate Bank," and those of individuals may be determined as early as practicable.

April 20, 1855, soon after the separate court of chancery was established, the chancellor rendered a decree against the residuary trustees, divesting them of all the assetts of the Real Estate Bank, and, the 25th of April, 1855, said trustees transferred the same to the receiver appointed by the court.

The Legislature of 1860, knowing that the bonds and the most of the interest thereon would be due in October, 1861, and that the mortgages given to the State to secure the State from loss or injury, would also fall due at the same time, passed a law January, 1861, providing for the foreclosure of the 1530 bonds, issued to the principal Bank, that were yet out and unpaid, but made no provision whatever for foreclosing the mortgage to secure the five hundred bonds issued to what is known as the Western Branch.

The civil war commenced soon after the passing of this law, and nothing was done in regard to them until after the close of the war.

The Legislature of 1867, passed an act providing that the Solicitor General might employ some lawyer to assist him in the prosecution of these mortgages. After the Legislature adjourned Governor Murphy appointed Hon. W. W. Wilshire, now chief justice, Solicitor General.

He employed Hon. E. H. English as assistant attorney to help bring the suits.

During the year 1867 they filed 184 suits of foreclosure upon lands, mortgaged to secure the bonds issued to the principal Bank.

They, also, through the instruction of Governor Murphy, as I am informed, brought suits of foreclosure upon the lands mortgaged to secure the State from loss, or injury for the bonds issued to the Western Branch of the Real Estate Bank.

This was the condition of these cases, when I was appointed Solicitor General in July, 1868. Since that time the cases, that are known as the Western Branch cases, have been dismissed by the Chancellor. They are, however, all on the docket, but one, and that one has been appealed, by the State, to the Supreme Court; all of the others will remain on the docket and abide the decision in that case. Statement "F" gives Chancellor Yonley's opinion in full. I have no great faith in gaining that case in the Supreme Court, and I respectfully urge that the General Assembly pass a law similar to the act of 1861 for the foreclosure of these mortgages.

I would respectfully call your attention to the fact, that a large number of the mortgages were never recorded, which the Chancellor has decreed, and, I think, correctly too, to be no lien as against innocent purchasers. Such being the case the law ought to provide that no suit should be brought on any mortgage, that is not recorded, unless the same is owned by the mortgagor or his heirs. Statement "A" shows the mortgages that are not recorded and the lands embraced therein.

Statement "B" shows the mortgages that are recorded and the lands embraced therein, in what is known as the Western Branch.

In regard to the suits for foreclosure of mortgages given to secure the bonds issued to the principal Bank, I have obtained a final deeree in ——— of these suits, and there has been already paid into the State treasury the sum of $29,348.78-100, upon said final decrees.

Statement "C" shows who paid the same and what lands were redeemed. There has quite a number of others applied to have an account taken, of the masters, as to how much is due on their lands, so that they can pay out what they owe.

The account is not yet completed in those cases, but soon will be, and that I think will swell the amount, paid in, to over fifty thousand dollars.

Statement "D" shows the lands in which there is a final decree, (yet unpaid), and the lands that are condemned by said decree and are being advertised preparatory for sale, as required by law.

A large portion of these suits of the principal Bank were and are now being defended by the ablest and most distinguished lawyers of the State.

They filed generally a demurrer to the bill, which raises the following questions:

"1. There is no equity in the bill.

"2. The State of Arkansas shows no right in herself to proceed in behalf of the creditors and the bondholders of said Real Estate Bank.

"3. The State of Arkansas does not show in and by her said bill, that she has paid the debt, or any part thereof, covered by the mortgage now sought to be foreclosed. Nor does she show that she has secured the payment thereof.

"4. The State of Arkansas has failed to bring before the court the bondholders or creditors, or to show who, and where they are.

"5. The claims or debts for the payment of which the mortgage is here sought to be foreclosed, are not produced in court, nor is it shown where they are; nor does the court show or pretend to show that she has any control whatever over them.

"6. The State of Arkansas fails to show what disposition has been made of the fund seized on her complaint, in the hands of the trustees, and placed in charge of the receiver of this court.

"7. The State of Arkansas fails to offer to turn over the fund seized on her complaint and placed in charge of the receiver, towards the payment of the debts of the said Real Estate Bank, or to account therefor.

"8. The proceeding here instituted by the State is authorized by a law in violation of the Constitution of the United States as well as the Constitution of the State of Arkansas.

"9. The demand herein sought to be enforced is stale and the State of Arkansas shows gross laches on her part in now claiming a foreclosure herein.

"10. In and by said bill, the State shows that her claim herein is at most, but an equitable one, and in seizing the fund of said bank and placing it in the hands of the receiver of this court, she should then have proceeded to foreclose such mortgage, and sought to have settled the rights of all parties in that cause, which she did not do, as appears by her said bill.

"11. Because there was not at the time of the institution of this suit, nor is there now any such State of Arkansas, as in said bill of complaint mentioned or authorized to sue herein."

These demurrers raise some very intricate and difficult questions of law, questions that require a careful and thorough investigation of over thirty years of legislation, in this State, in regard to the Real Estate Bank; questions that require a construction of certain parts of both the Constitution of the State and the United States; questions that will either secure to, or cost the State about two millions of dollars.

The State authorities and citizens generally have not seemed to appreciate the importance, to the State, of these cases. They did not realize that if these suits were gained, that it would give the State about two millions of dollars to pay off her present indebtedness.

They did not seem to realize that the rich and the poor were all taxed to pay the interest on the debt.

They did not seem to realize that if the money was recovered on these mortgages, that the taxes of this State could be reduced about $120,000 annually, which is now levied simply to pay the interest on these bonds.

It seldom happens in the practice of any lawyer to argue, or judge to decide, questions of such magnitude as those raised by these demurrers; questions that involve such a large amount of money.

——— of these cases were submitted to the chancellor on briefs, and after a long, careful and thorough examination of every question presented, he overruled the demurrers; or in other words, he decided that the law under which they were brought neither violated the Constitution of this State, or of the United States; that the lands were bound for the amount; that the mortgages, which had by law been assigned to the State, were good and valid mortgages, and that the State had a right to foreclose the same.

The defendants have appealed from the decision of the chancellor to the Supreme Court, and by agreement, entered of record, only one case has been taken to the Supreme Court, and all the other cases are to abide the decision in that case.

The case in the Supreme Court will be submitted this term and an early decision will probably be had. Should the Supreme Court affirm the chancellor's opinion, the State will soon realize what she has been endeavoring to do for years, namely: recover enough out of the mortgages and assets of the Real Estate Bank to liquidate most of her debts, and thereby largely reduce her annual taxes.

Statement "E" shows all the suits and lands involved in the questions raised by the demurrers, and which are now waiting the decision of the Supreme Court.

The act of March 21, 1867, allows the Solicitor General to employ additional counsel to help prosecute these cases. Under this law my predecessor employed Judge English to help him bring the suits, and the State treasurer paid him $8,070 00 therefor. I have not taken the benefit of this law, believing that I could successfully conduct the cases myself, and being desirous to not create any additional expense to the State, I have managed the cases without any assistance whatever, and have so far been successful.

There is one thing that I desire to call the special attention of the General Assembly to, that is: The most of the bonds that were issued to the Real Estate Bank have been funded by the State, and the new bonds are not receivable for these debts. I would respectfully urge the General Assembly to pass a law making the funded bonds of the State receivable for these debts.

Every one will see the importance of this at a glance. Every bond of the State that is taken up, reduces the State's indebtedness that much, and at the same time enables the debtors to pay off these mortgages at a discount. It would also make a new demand for nearly all of the funded bonds of the State, which would have a great tendency to improve the credit of the State at home and abroad.

I am, respectfully, your most obedient,

M. W. BENJAMIN, Solicitor General.

STATEMENT F, giving the Chancellor's opinion, in full, in regard to the Western Branch of the Real Estate Bank cases.*

STATE OF ARKANSAS

CERTAIN LANDS MORTGAGED BY JOHN DILLARD TO THE REAL ESTATE BANK.

The bill in this case is brought by the State of Arkansas on behalf of herself and the holders of the bonds issued by the State, under the act of the General Assembly, incorporating the Real Estate Bank of the State of Arkansas, to enable that bank to obtain banking capital, as well as on behalf of the creditors of the bank, to foreclose a mortgage given by John Dillard, upon certain lands therein described, to secure the payment of a stock bond executed by him to the Real Estate Bank, dated the 27th day of October, 1838, for the sum of fourteen thousand eight hundred and ninety-six dollars. The bill in this case is not brought against Dillard, his heirs, executors, administrators or assignees, or any other person claiming by, through, or under them, or against any person in possession of the property, but is brought directly against the land itself, and is to all intents and purposes, a proceeding in rem. To this bill Joseph H. Baily has interposed his demurrer, assigning among other causes, unnecessary to be noticed under the view which I take of this case, "that neither the said John Dillard nor his executors, administrators, nor heirs, nor any person claiming any interest in the lands mortgaged, nor any other person, is made defendant to said bill of complaint; nor is the said bill a proceeding against any person, but against the lands in rem, and that by the Constitution and laws of the United States and the State of Arkansas, the said mortgage cannot be foreclosed and all owners of said equity by a proceeding in rem against said lands." After mature reflection, I am well satisfied that this cause of demurrer is well taken. It is argued, however, that under the 13th and 14th sections of chapter 28, Gould's Digest, this court has jurisdiction of the subject matter of this suit, and that Baily, having appeared, claimed the land, and interposed a demurrer, is stopped from questioning the sufficiency of service, and that Baily having thereby entered his appearance, the court now has jurisdiction of both the person of Baily and of the subject matter of the suit, and ought to proceed to a final decree in this case. This argument is fallacious, and is sustained neither by reason nor authority. I am reminded, upon the argument in this case, that in remarking upon the case of the State vs. the lands of Moses Burnett, after deciding that the act entitled "an Act to aid in the foreclosure of stock mortgages," etc., approved January 16, 1861, was constitutional and valid, and afforded a sufficient warrant for the mode of proceeding adopted in that case; that I said "even were this not so, yet having appeared generally and filed his demurrer to the bill, it is now too late to question the sufficiency of the service." I certainly did so decide, but it is nevertheless erroneous. I was then, as I still am, firmly convinced of the constitutionality of the act in pursuance of the provisions of which that suit was brought, and did not in the least intend to rest my decision upon what was said about the appearance and demurrer of the claimant in that case. My attention was not called to what would be the attitude of a case, brought as this case is, independent of, and not warranted by the provisions of that act. This case is not claimed to be within the provisions of the act above alluded to. That act provides for the foreclosure of the mortgages given under the 13th section of the act establishing the Real Estate Bank of Arkansas, approved October 26, 1836, and for the foreclosure of none other. The object of these foreclosures was to provide a fund for the payment of the fifteen hundred and thirty bonds originally issued by the State to the Real Estate Bank. The mortgage to foreclose which this bill is brought, is not comprehended within either the terms or meaning of this act, it belongs to a different class of mortgages altogether. Such being the case, the inquiry is reduced to this simple question. Can a bill, independent of a statute for that purpose; be brought in rem against real estate to foreclose a mortgage given thereon? We would seek in vain for an authority warranting such a proceeding, both in the equity jurisprudence of England and America. It is certainly true that the act of January 16, 1861, relates entirely to the remedy and not to the right. It provides a remedy for the foreclosure of certain mortgages, of which the mortgage now in question is not one. The mortgages included within the statute may be foreclosed in pursuance of the statute, but those which are beyond its provisions, must be proceeded upon according to the established rules of equity jurisprudence, that is to say, by a proceeding in personam and a proceeding in rem.

Indeed, the difficulty in this case, is not about the service only; the trouble is of a decidedly more serious character. Had this suit been brought against the parties at interest, as defendants, then their general appearance to the bill would have dispensed with service, or cured a defective one; but the bill is brought against the land, and is wholly without the sanction of law. The demurrer questions not the sufficiency of the service, but attacks the validity of the entire proceeding, and denies the right of the court to take cognizance of a suit brought in this manner, and to render a decree of foreclosure therein, which, in law, could have the effect to bar the equity of redemption of the parties in interest; asserts that the suit is brought in violation of the rules of equity jurisprudence, and is, therefore, without a locus standi in a court of chancery. These objections are well taken, and seem to me to be beyond controversy. If the State can, without the aid of a statute, proceed in rem to foreclose this mortgage, why cannot every mortgage be foreclosed by a like proceedure? The State is here merely as a suitor, and in this, as in every other suit brought by her, she must proceed according to the known rules of law, or otherwise fail. There is, in a legal point of view, no suit here. To constitute a suit in chancery, except in a few cases that may be proceeded in ex parte, there must be a party complainant and defendant, and every departure from this rule must depend upon some statute law for its sanction. The appearance of the claimant does not help the matter. There is no suit pending in this court against Baily, to which he can enter his appearance as a defendant. The proceeding is against the lands of which he claims to be the owner. He comes into court and says he owns the lands, and by his demurrer objects to the legal right of this court to take cognizance of this case, brought in the manner it is, or to render any decree whatever in the premises; denies, in fact, the jurisdiction of the court to decree a foreclosure of the mortgage given by Dillard, under the form of proceedure adopted in this case. Having appeared as he has done, cannot take away his right to do this. Every defendant can do this, whether he has voluntarily appeared to the action, or been brought into court by the due service of process. At common law, the defendant could enter his appearance, and then demur to the form of the action, as that debt had been brought when the action should have been assumpsit; and it would have been no answer to have said that the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and that by reason of the defendant's appearance, the court had acquired jurisdiction of his person. The objection is to the form of the action, and if well taken, puts an end to the suit. It is true, there never were any forms of action in equity proceedings necessary to be adopted to enforce particular rights, or to redress particular wrongs, yet there are certain well-fixed rules to which every proceeding in chancery must conform, and among them is the rule, never departed from to my knowledge, that a suit in chancery must be a proceeding in personam. Certainly a court of chancery may, as incident to a suit brought, lay hold of property, and hold it subject to the final result of the suit, but can, according to the rules of equity jurisprudence, never proceed directly against property as a party to the suit. This case not being within the act of 16th of January, 1861, and being a proceeding against the land itself, brought without the sanction of law, is not a proceeding of which this court can take cognizance, and must therefore be dismissed.

T. D. W. YONLEY, Chancellor.
